SALUTATORY.

The people of this city and surrounding sections are just beginning to recognize the fact that East St. Louis is destined to become the manufacturing center of the Mississippi Valley. Many, perhaps, consider such a statement quite visionary, but past experience and the present outlook fully justify the ardent admirer of East St. Louis in using terms expressive of most sanguine expectations for this city, not alone in the manufacturing world, but in other branches of industry as well.

The town is situated on the borders of the greatest coal measures in the world, and not far from crude iron and an exhaustless supply of minerals, giving it the advantage of other places seeking to control the manufacturing industries of the country.

The only drawback, lowness of the city, which the town has heretofore labored under, and the one which undoubtedly retarded its progress in all directions, has, through the push, energy and foresight of the present mayor and city council been eradicated, and ere the close of the next fiscal year shall be spoken of as a thing of the past. The grade, with its corollary, the extensive sewerage system which will keep the city dry and furnish an outlet for the vast amount of water which necessarily follows the establishment of mills and factories, was the key to our advancement. The mayor and council seeing the necessity of a drainage system, and being prompted by a desire to further the interests of the city by placing it in a position to invite mill owners and manufacturers generally, inaugurated a general reconstruction of the city's streets, which movement has received the sanction of our people and the support of the press from every city in this and surrounding States. The scheme, although gigantic, has attracted the moneyed men of the country, and already the isolated sections of the town are becoming dotted with buildings for residence, business and manufacturing purposes.

What with the improvement of the streets, a perfect police system, water works and fire department, the city can surely boast of its metropolitan proportions, and offer those who desire to invest a safe and sure interest on their money.

The railroad facilities here are greater than any other city in the world, and importations are $5 per car cheaper than our sister across the river can offer the merchant. With these few casual observations the management of the directory place the book in the hands of the public, hoping it will be received with favor on the part of the citizens regardless of the slight inaccuracies which may have in advertently crept into it. The managers, although attempting the work solely for the purpose of presenting the postoffice authorities with a guide and not for the sinister motive of a pecuniary consideration, extend thanks to those of our merchants who assisted the enterprise, and assurances have been given that our people will obtain the much needed free mail delivery at no distant day, and that consideration alone will fully repay those who spent time and money on the present volume.

Again thanking those who materially assisted in the compilation of the book, and congratulating the JOURNAL'S workmen upon the typographical excellence of the work, we beg leave to remain,

[FROM ST. LOUIS REPUBLIC.]

Mighty events are awaiting development in East St. Louis. Mayor M. M. Stephens and the present city council builded most wisely and well when they conceived and put into execution the grading, paying and sewering the public thoroughfares of the city, elevating it above the danger flood line, miasmatic influences and possible disease and death. When it is considered that the site of East St. Louis was originally a wilderness of swamps, bogs and sloughs, and that all the vital forces in the early settlement of the country and the march of civilization, in a commercial and social sense, were practically absorbed by St. Louis, because of its ready eligibility for the rearing of a great city in this section of the Mississippi Valley, the development of East St. Louis as a competitor to the proud, unvielding spirit of the daring men who laid the foundation for the future metropolis of the valley States, is simply a wonder of the nineteenth century. For long years, while St. Louis was struggling for an existence and a name, the site of East St. Louis and the broad expanse of fertile country contiguous thereto, was comparatively unknown, unheralded except, perhaps, as a hunting and fishing grounds for men of leisure and idlers.

A RETROSPECT.

It has been said that God made the country, and man made the town. This, however, was a hasty utterance. When we consider the natural causes that conspire to give importance to given situations on the globe, where commercial advantages are great, and agriculture, the great mother of all temporal interests, has rich and open fields; when mines are over-running with riches and ready to pour in their wealth at the bidding of busy man, we see the power and hear the fiat of God as much in the creation of the town as in that of the country. The town is the crown of the country, the spot most favored of all the country. Its markets are fed by the agricultural and mineral products, and its very life-blood and robust health assured by the vigor of the outlying country, by the replacement of men of failing health and fortune in the rushing town, with men of strong physique, bounding blood, and intact coffers from the quiet country. So, as it is a general truth that God made the country, that truth includes the other, that he also made the country's most important part, the town. These principles which were taught to Alexander the Great by the greater Aristotle led the former to the site of Alexandria, where he built a city whose hygienic, commercial and literary advantages were unsurpassed in the Ancient World. These principles led Romulus to the site of Rome. By these were founded other cities of the classic age. And the same can be said of Paris, London and Vienna.

In our own country, in modern times, the same reasons in 1729 piloted the fleet of Lord Baltimore to the head of Chesapeake Bay, where he laid out Baltimore; the ships of William Penn, in 1682, to the confluence of the Delaware and Schuylkill rivers for the founding of Philadelphia; induced Peter Minuits of the Dutch West India Company, in 1625, to pay $24 to the Indians for the Island of Manhattan, between Hudson river and Long Island Sound, and established the City of New York; led Bienville in 1718 to found New Orleans, near the Gulf of Mexico, on a crescent of the Mississippi; caused two Franciscan missionaries, in 1776, to found San Francisco, on that bay, and open the Golden Gate of America to the riches of the Indies; drew the first white man, Father James Marquette, to the site of Chicago; founded and prospered many other cities, like pearls in a crown. And which, in 1764, led Pierre Laclede Liguest and Colonel Auguste Chouteau to

at the confluence of the Illinois, Missouri and Mississippi rivers, like a central diamond in the crowm of Columbia, which is now, by means of the great Iron bridge, interlaced with its sister, East St. Louis, on the east side of the Father of Waters.

While Missouri possesses the world's immense iron and other rich mineral deposits, Illinois is the great coal-field and granary, the power controlling the manufacturing industries, which, perhaps, had more to do with establishing the site of East St. Louis than any other cause. Located in St. Clair county, facing St. Louis to the West, the converging point of not less than 12 Eastern and Southern lines of railway, it is the great entrepot, as well as the gateway, tor more than one-half the Union, from the East to the West, the Eads bridge, one of the finest structures of the kind in the world, forming the link between the two sections of the country—the pivotal point between the West and the East in the central portion of the valley States-hence its development was assured from the first, an unerring combination of nature's gifts to man conspiring, with the march of civilization, to erect here, in conjunction with St. Louis, one of the great manufacturing and commercial marts of the American continent. Notwithstanding the floods of 1844, 1851 and 1858, for a time retarding its growth and prosperity, East St. Louis, from the date of its first appearance as a habitable town, has ever steadily and surely pressed forward to its destiny. It is a natural location for a manufacturing city, its surroundings combining to assure this. It is the entrepot for the vast coal-fields of Illinois, with the inexhaustible wealth of mineral resources to the West in Missouri-both, or, rather, in the economy of nature, all these elements of the nation's grandeur and greatness must meet here to be fashioned and shaped for the world's use. Then the producing power of its agricultural and horticultural surroundings is unexcelled on the face of the globe, the famous valley counties of Illinois, the renowned American bottoms, the soil of which is so fertile that the constant raising of corn for nearly 200 years without the aid of fertilizers has made no perceptible difference in its production, while the yield ranges from 60 to 160 bushels per acre. This matchless agricultural region is now thickly settled by a thrifty, energetic people, whose natural market is East St. Louis, to which they furnish an immense and constantly increasing volume of business. As a consequence, the necessaries of life are reasonable in price, which is a strong point in its favor as a manufacturing city, with a large population of sturdy wage-earners, to whom such a condition is absolutely indispensable.

OUR RAILROAD TRANSPORTATION FACILITIES.

Railroad connection with the outside world dates from February, 1852, when, in the presence of assembled thousands, ground was formally broken for the construction of the Ohio and Mississippi—the first trunk line railway to enter East St. Louis from the East—which was completed in June, 1856, in connection with the Baltimore and Ohio line, to Cincinnati and Baltimore. From this period in its history East St. Louis took a new start and grew rapidly. To reach St. Louis, all railroad lines from the East must necessarily terminate at East St. Louis, so that to-day it is the converging point of no less than 12 Eastern and Southern great trunk lines of railway, namely:

Mobile and Ohio Railroad.

Cairo Short Line Railroad.

Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati and St. Louis Railroad.

Louisville and Nashville Railroad.

St. Louis, Vandalia and Terre Haute Railroad.

Ohio and Mississippi Railroad.

Chicago and Alton Railroad.

The Wabash system of Railroads.

Toledo, St. Louis and Kansas City Railroad.

Louisville, Evansville and St. Louis Railroad.

Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad.

Louisville, St. Louis and Texas Railroad.

In addition to the foregoing there are 12 branches, many of them in importance to trade and commerce equal to the main lines, as follows:

Illinois and St. Louis Railroad and Coal Company.

East St. Louis Connecting Railway.

East St. Louis and Carondelet Railway.

Venice and Carondelet Railway.

Ohio Valley Railway.

Illinois Central Branch via Cairo Short Line Railroad.

St. Louis Bridge and Tunnel Railroad.

Springfield and East St. Louis Railroad.

Illinois Central Branch over Vandalia Railroad.

Belleville and East St. Louis Railway.

Springfield, Alton and St. Louis Railway.

Nearly all the trunk line railway companies have erected large shops in East St. Louis, and all have immense frieght yards, houses and depots, employing large forces of men, which add materially to the city's population and trade. Besides the great railroad system mentioned above, the city is also connected with no less than eight railroads which enter East St. Louis from the south and west by means of the great bridge and the Wiggins Ferry Co., making it, in fact, one of the greatest railroad centres in the United States, if not in the world.

RIVER FACILITIES.

It also has the additional advantages of navigation north and south on the Mississippi river and its tributavies, so that as far as transportation facilities are concerned East St. Louis challenges comparison with any city in the West.

GENERAL ADVANTAGES.

East St. Louis, with a present population of about 18,000, which is rapidly increasing, her people enjoy a large percentage of the necessities and comforts of a great manufacturing and commercial city. Her water system is immense and daily extending throughout its vast area, already there being more than 19 miles of water mains, with all other requisities in this respect to supply the city with wholesome water, including the constant accumulation of manufacturing industries. The public school system, too, is now of such a character as to challenge admiration from all sources. The school buildings are in keeping with the advance movement of civilization throughout the entire country, large and commodious, with furnishings that will compare with like institutions in St. Louis, Chicago or any other city in the land, while the religious welfare of the people is carefully guarded by being amply supplied with church edifices to do credit to the best towns in the West.

The predominant influences that combine to build up and develop large centres of trade, commerce, manufacturing, mining, transportation and other industries are found operating in favor of East St. Louis. Happily situated and directly connected with the chief metropolis of the Mississippi Valley, the city of East St. Louis possesses many very great and commanding advantages that do not attach to St. Louis, while the full benefits of her proximity to that city are invaluable. The establishment of new and the enlargement of existing manufacturing institutions on the banks of the Mississippi river must be largely determined by the command of certain localities of the greater advantages offered. That in the near future, and in fact at the present time, a want of space and other causes the location of the larger class of manufactories in St. Louis, while the impossibility of getting track room or water fronts on the West side is well known to all who have investigated the matter. The steady and rapid removals of establishments to East St. Louis from St. Louis have been continuing until now the large share of the grain elevator capacity and almost total of meat packing has found location on the East side. East St. Louis has ample room and affords every facility for the location of manufactories of all kinds.

RECENTLY LOCATED.

The fact that only such facilities could be found in East St. Louis forced the removal and location of the great National stock yards, the Beef Canning Co., the St. Louis Bolt and Iron mills, the Freeman Wire Works and the Todd Pulley Works, the Meysenberg Iron mill, Elliott Railroad Frog works, Cotton Compress works, two farming implement warehouses, Metal works, Powder works and a few others. With a water front of many miles, improved and reached by all the great railroads that terminate here, was the inducement for the location of the East St. Louis, Pittsburg, Advance and Union elevators instead of at St. Louis.

OUR INEXHAUSTIBLE COAL AND IRON SUPPLY.

The comparative cost of coal at either side of the river must work favorably to East St. Louis, for the great coal-fields of Madison, St. Clair, Perry, Randolph, Williamson, Jackson and other counties in Western and Southern Illinois insure an inexhaustible supply In fact, cheaper coal can be had here than at any other point in the United States. These mines are only a few miles distant and reached by more than a dozen independent lines of railroad.

Therefore the commanding advantages of East St. Louis in the supply of coal must be considered by manufacturers as of vast importance. The inexhaustible supply of superior coal at East St. Louis from mining districts within 6 to 50 miles, located on a dozen or more different railroads, must always insure fuel at the minimum of cost. This, added to the near supply of iron, copper, lead and other ores in Southwest Missouri, and the fact that this is the world's greatest centre of food supply, will soon invite numbers of manufacturers of every description to where, their products can be distributed by water and rail to all parts of the country.

Coal can be delivered to any part of East St. Louis or railroad track or switch at 5 cents per bushel. There are 80 pounds in a bushel; 2,000 pounds in a ton. There are as many bushels in a ton as equal the number of times which 2,000 pounds contain 80 pounds, which equals 25 bushels; 25x06=$1.25 per ton, far cheaper than cordwood in the forest regions. It can be delivered to manufacturing establishments of East St. Louis at from one-third to one-half less than it can be delivered west of the river.

Tracks can be run from almost any road to any furnace door. Coal can be contracted for by the year, and thus this great want be conveniently and cheaply met.

The miner's rule for the above measurement is that in a square mile, equal to one section of coal, one foot thick, there are 1,000,000 tons of coal. All that is needed, therefore, to estimate the number of tons of coal under a township or county is to reduce it to square miles and multiply the number of feet, showing the thickness of the coal-bed. The product will be the number of tons under the land.

St. Clair county contains 1,030 square miles. The coal bed underneath is seven feet thick. This is 7,000,000 tons of coal to the square mile. This multiplied by 1,030 gives 7,210,000,000 tons of coal which underlie the grand old county of St. Clair, affording enough coal to last for ages to come. All this coal is of easy access by rail on a down-grade to the very doors of the furnaces of East St. Louis manufactories at a nominal cost of $1.25 per ton delivered.

VAST RAILWAY SYSTEM.

The vast railway system that centres here, as well as the steamboat and barge lines, give a reach and volume of shipping capacity not exceeded by any point in the country. Added to all these, the command of minerals and the cheapest and best food supply in the world all belong to East St. Louis. All manufactories, elevators, warehouses, foundries, mills and other establishments now located here are in easy connection with each other and all lines of rail and water transportation east or west of the river. All necessary sidetracks and other conveniences can be secured. The three connecting railways at East St. Louis, viz., the Illinois and St. Louis, or "Belt Line," the East St. Louis and Carondelet and the East St. Louis Connecting Railroad, assure every facility for easy transfer to and from all directions.

To parties seeking locations for manufacturing, packing or other purposes, where ample room and cheap transfer of supply or product is the desideratum, no place offers as many advantages as East St. Louis. Lands are cheap, transportation unexcelled, labor at command and the markets of St. Louis and the South, West, East and North inviting. When it is remembered that East St. Louis is situated in the heart of the Western States it will prove instructive to study some few great facts about these States, therefore the following tables are given;

Thus it will be seen that, no matter in what light East St. Louis may be viewed, it offers almost unparalleled advantages, and such certainly as but few others can offer, for manufaturing and business of ALL kinds.

EAST ST. LOUIS, REDEEMED AND REJUVENATED, AT LAST ARISES PHOENIX-LIKE.

After years of unparalleled tribulation in the management of its municipal affairs, the accumulation of a mountain of indebtedness, loss of public confidence in its ability to stem the tide of local corruption, the better element, realizing the fatal abyss over which they were hanging, resolved, at all hazards, to assume the reins of government and bring order out of chaos, which was accomplished by the election of M. M. Stephens as the chief executive of the city, as well as a city council composed of men true and tried in the administration of public affairs for the best interests of the entire community. This done, and phænix-like, East St. Louis was at once raised from the ashes of desolation. A new era dawned upon the city—an era of development, progress and prosperity. Perhaps in no city, town or hamlet throughout the length and breadth of the land have more radical and propitious changes taken place within the last three years than in East St. Louis, and the march of progress, great as it has been within that period, promises to be even greater in the future. Three years ago East St. Louis easily led in having the worst repute of any city in the United States. But all that has passed away during the three years of the present administration. The city's revenues have been honestly expended for public purposes; its affairs are conducted on business principles; its indebtedness has been funded and its financial credit restored, and important and necessary improvements have been made and paid for. All transactions are conducted on a cash basis, a thing unknown in the past history of the city. Radical changes and clean-cut reforms have been introduced and firmly established, so that no city in the land enjoys a better administration than does East St. Louis.

PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS.

Streets and sidewalks have been made on a large scale, one, a granite paved street, costing over $100,000; sewers have been laid, bridges built, public buildings erected, and an effective fire department established, and numerous other improvements have been perfected.

These numerous improvements served to restore confidence to the city's own people, and a spirit of private enterprise at once began to manifest itself, buildings and business pervaded every part of the city, and improvements have been and are the order of the day.

These changes not only had their effect upon home people, but have attracted the attention of capitalists and manufacturers abroad, and during the past three years a number of industrial concerns, representing millions of capital and giving employment to hundreds of men, have located in the city and erected their establishments, and are doing so well that numerous other manufactures are negotiating for plants.

To all such establishments the city gives the most liberal inducements. Besides the natural advantages of the place, the city grants an exemption from taxes for 10 years to all such as employ a considerable number of workmen, while the Waterworks Co. furnish water free. Within a brief period of time hundreds of thousands of dollars have been expended in permanent improvements, i. e., building, etc., besides the vastly greater sum which has been paid out for help. To-day there is no place of the same population of East St. Louis that pays out monthly or semi-monthly more money for wages to workmen than does East St. Louis.

This year the city started out to make other permanent and much needed improvements. The greatest difficulty this city has had to contend with was that its streets were low and admitted of no sewerage. These complications were such that street railway advantages were out of the question, a feature that no modern city can get along without.

With the rapidly increasing population, it was seen that without sewerage a plague, such as devastated Memphis a few years ago and for a time promised to depopulate it, might at any time depulicate its terrors in East St. Louis, and the city determined that if for no other reason than that of humanity and to protect life, that such improvements should be made as would admit of good sewerage, believing that it would enchance the value of property, attract the attention of capitalists and thus serve a two-fold purpose. A permanent grade was therefore established, which is known as the high-water mark of 1858.

There are three main streets in the city, Broadway and Missouri avenue, running east and west, and Collinsville avenue running north and south, Main street being practically but a continuation of Collinsville avenue. Broadway connects with the St. Louis bridge and receives all the traffic that crosses that structure. Missouri avenue is the street that passes by the Relay Depot and on to Front 'street, and receives all the traffic from the eastern country, as well as that from Collinsville avenue, the stock yards and the northern country. Collinsville avenue and Main street receive all the traffic from both the north and south country, as well as from the stock yards, Meysenberg mill, Cotton Compress works and the Elliot Frog shops.

STREET ELEVATIONS AND PAVING.

The city authorities determined that those important thoroughfares should be raised to the grade, sewered and paved, they not only being the main streets of the place, but the principal business streets of the city. Ordinances were passed and the work was commenced on Broadway. The improvement was commenced at the west end of Broadway and extended east to the Belleville turnpike, a distance of nearly three-quarters of a mile, putting in a 30-inch sewer pipe in the centre of the street, building a rock retaining wall on each side of the street to hold the fill, curbing, guttering and paving with granite. The cost was estimated at $48,000, to be collected by special assessment on the property abutting on the street. The contract was let to Messis. Allen & Vieths of St. Louis and Niemes & Reimann of this city. The fill at the west end amounts to nothing, but it gradually increases as the work goes east till a fill of nearly 10 feet is required at the east end. At the intersection of cross-streets the approaches will be gradual. The gradient is six inches in 100 feet, while the crown of the pavement is six inches, making a good drainage to the sewer openings. The sewer has a fall of seven inches in 100 feet. A number of the business buildings will have to be raised to conform to the new grade-Several of the city's most prominent merchants have raised their brick business houses to a height of eight feet, and others are rapidly following their example, though many do not have to raise so high.

IRON AND STEEL VIADUCT.

To avoid the dangers of the Broadway railroad crossing, and to afford an opportunity for street railway advantages, the council has ordered the erection of an iron or steel viaduct over those half dozen railroads on Broadway, from the Workingmen's Bank to beyond Cahokia creek. The contract price of the viaduct is $49,000. Work has commenced on this improvement. An line will be built through East St. Louis so soon as the streets above named are graded, and will connect with the road that is being made by the bridge. The next street to undergo similar improvements is Collinsville avenue, which is one mile in length. The estimated cost of this improvement is $75,000. The contract for the work has been awarded to Allen & Vieths of St. Louis, and work will be commenced at once and finished this year. The improvement on this street will be the same as on Broadway, except that in place of granite pavement there will be Telford pavement, covered with gravel. The fill that is being used to bring East St. Louis up to the grade is taken from the hills in the West End of St. Louis, which are being levelled to give room for its growth. As soon as Broadway and Collinsville avenue are completed, Missouri avenue will undergo the same line of improvement at a cost of $50,000.

Besides the improvements enumerated, the city has contracted for an iron bridge over Cahokia creek, on Missouri avenue, which will cost $3,400, and a wooden bridge over the same stream on Trendley avenue, at a cost of $1,700. A sewer has also been built on Brady street at a considerable cost. The City Hall has been raised to 1844 grade, which is four feet three inches above that of the water of 1858.

The regrading or raising of Broadway will probably not be extended beyond St. Henry's school this season, but beyond that point lies the land of Mr. McCasland, the East St. Louis real estate man, who has already cut a street through his property, and who will bring that street to grade while the temporary railroad track is in use to bring materials for raising the street west of his property. The McCasland property was known as Pecan Grove, and any East St. Louis man who wanted it and had the money could have bought it cheap. It remained for the present owner to buy it, run a street through it, plat it, and after selling enough lots to make good his purchase money, still has about half the tract left on hand. East St. Louis people, like Mr. John B. Lovingston, after standing idly by for years, have bought lots from Mr. McCasland at $10 a foot which they could, years ago, have bought for almost a song. have paid $10 a foot knowing beforehand that they will have to stand their share of the cost of bringing Broadway up to the new grade. Paul W. Abt, Dr. H. J. DeHaan, Dr. H. C. Fairbrother and others have also platted tracts of land, and sold the lots at a large profit.

OUR UNION OR RELAY DEPOT.

The fifteen railroad companies controlling the Relay Depot will in the near future remove the structure to some point out on St. Clair avenue, not far from the site of the old Ohio and Mississippi round house. The structure to be put up will be something unequalled for convenience and beauty, and simultaneously with this work the tracks from the east end of the bridge are to be changed so as to have an easy grade. This will probably lift them over the present grade of the street at the present Relay Depot and do away with another dangerous crossing. It possibly is true that for these last mentioned improvements East St. Louis will have to wait till the city on the Missouri side gets a new Union Depot, but those on the inside say that even that fact can't keep the car of progress back very long.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING.

The railway yards of East St. Louis are illuminated at night by arc lights of the Thompson-Houston pattern. A few weeks ago the city granted a franchise to the Electric Light and Power Co. to establish and operate a lighting station to supply light for private and public purposes, which will be a valuable adjunct to the present gas works and give East St. Louis all the light she wants. The works are already under construction.

TAXATION.

One thing that bothers an Eastern capitalist who contemplates investing in East St. Louis is the peculiarities of the local assessment for taxation. There's a State tax of 40 cents, a county tax of 40 cents, a city tax of $1 70, a school tax of $2 and a funded debt tax of $1; total, $5 50 on the $100. There isn't any township tax, as the city officers perform the duties of township officers. Thus, the city council has all the powers of a board of supervisors, the city clerk is township clerk, the street inspectors are highway commissioners, and so on.

Now, $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. looks like a pretty steep tax, and if property in East St. Louis was assessed at a full valuation, or even on the equivalent of the sort of valuation that obtains on the Missouri side of the river, it would be more tax than the property ought to bear. But while the assessment on the St. Louis side of the river increases from year to year, the assessment of East St. Louis for last year is absolutely less than that for the year before. East St. Louis is now assessed at something like \$3,000,000. A fair assessment would be something like \$7,000.000, and then the tax required to produce the necessary revenue would barely exceed 2 per cent. It will surprise some people to know that in 1877 East St. Louis was assessed at over \$6,000,000. A similar state of affairs in Chicago explains why the total assessed valuation of that city is less than that of St. Louis.

As in other place in Illinois, on account of its revenue system, the property of East St. Louis is not assessed at not more than one-fifth of its value, so that taxation is low here compared with that of places in other States.

THE VALUE OF THIS YEAR'S IMPROVEMENTS.

The progress being made in East St. Louis by gigantic street and other public improvement, including the large number of new buildings erected this season and the amount or their cost, which is a fair exhibit of how the town is growing, the figures showing an expenditure of more than $553,780. This does not include the outlay of $200,000 for street improvements, viaduct, new bridges, sewers, etc., swelling the total expenditure for new enterprises in nine months during 1889 to $752,780, simply the investment in new store houses and private residences throughout the city. Analyze this condition of things and it will at once be seen how many homes are being made contented and happy by a liberal provision for employment at remunerative wages—mechanics and laborers by the hundred kept busy, month in and month out. This is but the beginning of the progress to be made by East St. Louis.

STILL GOING FORWARD.

Next season (1890) will witness additional hundreds of mechanics and laborers at work here, revolutionizing the entire make-up of the city. Why, the good work of reconstruction has just commenced, and it is not to abate one hour, one day, until there shall have been erected at this point on the Father of Waters one of the grandest cities throughout the length and breadth of the valley States.

It must be apparent to the most casual observer that just at the present there are mighty influences at work in East St. Louis; mighty influences for good. Whence come they, and why? come from the East, the West, the North and the South. come because of the regeneration of the city; come to possess themselves of the superior advantages in location offered for all manner of commercial and industrial transactions. On every hand are evidences of a new order of things, and they speak louder than words of the new era of unexampled prosperity now upon us. It has always been said by those conversant with local conditions that if a boom should ever strike East St. Louis it would put the booms of all other cities into the shade. The signs of it are visible now, nor are any other present which show that it will be long in coming. East St. Louis has undergone a change that shall bring her into newer, stronger and more profitable relations with the country and and the world.

As a practical exhibit of the rapid growth of East St. Louis, as ingle contractor out of a dozen or more has put up within the past nine month more than $100,000 worth of new buildings, with no let up to the work coming in. There are any number of contractors in East St. Louis who are absorbing the mechanical skill of the entire surrounding country, without any reference whatever to day and monthly laborers employed.

"EXCELSIOR!"

As you walk across the St. Louis bridge from St. Louis toward the growing city on the Illinois side, the last inscription to be noted on the Missouri side is the word "Excelsior," coupled with a representation of the rising sun and a hint that manufacturing enterprises are a community's surest guarantees of wealth. You stroll through the streets of East St. Louis and talk to the people who have stood by their own town, and you come to the conclusion—there is no other conclusion possible—that the motto of the place is the word you saw at the other end of the bridge. And, like a coral island which the polyps have industriously maintained above the level of the waves. East St. Louis is rising, in a physical sense, through the energy of her own citizens, and this exhibit is bringing to the place outside capital and enterprise, and shortly it will be to St. Louis what Brooklyn is to New York. "Excelsior!"
